Manager Commentary

The MSCI Emerging Markets Index rose by 9.2% in April, its best monthly return for four years and a reasonable recovery from March, which had been the weakest month for more than a decade. EMEA (+10.9%) was the best performing region, followed by Emerging Asia (+9.2%) and Latin America (+6.3%). In a reversal of March's trends, all sectors were up for April, with the materials (+15.0%) and energy (+13.9%) sectors recovering some of the ground that they had lost. Real estate (+5.9%) and financials (+6.2%) lagged the broader market recovery somewhat.

The biggest contributor to performance was MercadoLibre, the Fund's largest position, when its shares rose strongly following a sharp decline in March. Another investment that performed well was Becele, the Mexican owner of the Cuervo tequila brands. It reported on the last day of April, noting strong lockdown-led demand from US consumers for its large format bottles of Jose Cuervo Especial and its ready-to-drink margarita mix. Amongst the detractors was Mexican cable operator Megacable, despite reporting resilient demand for its pay TV and broadband services during the first quarter of 2020. Dali Foods, which had been an outlier in March when it made a positive contribution to performance, subsequently saw its shares decline during April.
