Manager Commentary

The fund was up 3.87% in Euro terms in February, outperforming the MSCI World by 25 basis points.

The main contributors were Mastercard, MarketAxess and Keyence.

Mastercard saw continued upward momentum after reporting strong FY18 results at the end of January. The secular shift to electronic payments and cross border payment prospects should help to drive growth in this business going forward. MarketAxess, the electronic bond trading platform reported record Open Trading volumes for January. The Open Trading protocol enables all market participants to trade directly with each other. Electronic bond trading is currently less than 20% penetrated. Uptake should continue to grow as market participants increasingly look for efficiency and best execution. Japanese business Keyence rallied after its share price pulled back in January. Keyence develops high end, value added sensors and other products used in factory and process automation. There are a number of secular drivers for this business: smart factories, Internet of Things, wage inflation and increasingly stringent quality requirements.

The main detractors were, UnitedHealth Group, Booking Holdings and EssilorLuxottica

The UnitedHealth Group share price was pressured in February due to concerns around healthcare reform. The Democrats' proposed Medicare For All program could have the potential to negatively impact the business, particularly in the commercial health insurance division. Booking Holdings reported strong Q4 and FY18 results but lower than expected guidance for 2019 led to a drop in share price. The EssilorLuxottica share price was weak due to investor concerns around progression with the integration.
