Manager Commentary

The fund is up 5.23% in Euro terms for 2018, outperforming the MSCI World by 940 basis points. 98 basis points of relative performance were added in December. The main contributors in December were Intertek, CME Group and EssilorLuxottica. Intertek provides assurance, testing, inspection and certification services that ensure customers' products meet quality, health, environmental, safety, and social accountability standards. Its recent trading update exhibited an improving organic growth trend offering reassurance after a weaker H1 number and global trade concerns. CME Group, the leading derivatives marketplace, is a beneficiary of market volatility and interest rate anxiety. EssilorLuxottica held up well following a weak November. Longer-term growth opportunities include growth in myopia (5 billion people by 2050), sun prescription market growth (currently 5% of total sun market), digital activities, and development of the photochromic market. The main detractors in December were UnitedHealth Group, Ulta Beauty and Mastercard. Having performed strongly through the year, UnitedHealth drifted lower in December driven by regulatory concerns. Ulta beauty is the largest speciality US beauty retailer. Investors focused on the weaker margin profile at its recent quarterly results, pressured by salon investments, stock clearance and channel and category mix. Same-store-sales growth accelerated and the company continues to gain market share. Mastercard was weak on concerns of an economic slowdown and the corresponding impact on consumer spending and payment volume growth. Lower gas prices and EM volatility may have also weighed on sentiment. Payment networks have outperformed during periods of slow or declining consumer spending due to the secular trend of cash and cheques to electronic payments.
