Manager Commentary

The fund is up 3.42% year-to-date in Euro terms, outperforming the MSCI World by 458 basis points. 39 basis points of relative performance were added in April.

The main contributors in April were United Health, Ulta Beauty and Booking Holdings.

United Health raised its guidance for 2018 on the back of continued good momentum demonstrated by its solid Q1 results. In addition, better than expected Medicare Advantage reimbursement rates for 2019 were finalised by CMS (“Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services”).

Ulta’s stock was buoyed by evidence that speciality beauty retailers are continuing to take market share and are not having to engage in promotional activity to sustain high growth rates.

Booking Holdings benefited from “better than feared” results from Expedia that calmed investor worries about the general health of the global travel market.

The main detractors in April were FANUC, Novozymes and Colgate.

FANUC released quarterly sales ahead of the consensus but issued a forecast for the year to March 2019 which was well below the consensus, citing an expected deceleration of short-term demand from IT-related industry clients; the potential impact of Trump’s trade friction; and FX fluctuations.

Novozymes and Colgate both reported lacklustre Q1 results with the latter having to reduce its organic sales growth target for 2018 only three months after its initial publication.
