Manager Commentary

The fund is up 12.80% year-to-date in Sterling terms, outperforming the MSCI World Index by 203 basis points. 174 basis points of outperformance were added in May.

The main contributors in May were CME Group, MarketAxess and UnitedHealth Group.

CME Group, the derivatives marketplace benefitted from increased volatility after a subdued Q1 and recent reported Average Daily Volume (ADV) numbers were strong. MarketAxess, a fixed income electronic trading platform, also reported good monthly volume statistics. UnitedHealth Group's share price rallied as investor concerns around the Democrats' proposed Medicare For All plan abated.

The main detractors in May were Booking Holdings, Alphabet and Cognizant.

Despite reporting strong Q1 results in May, Booking Holdings was weak due to concerns around the impact of a slowing Chinese economy on Asian tourism. Notwithstanding strong organic revenue growth and lower than expected Traffic Acquisition Costs (TAC), Alphabet traded lower as reported Q1 results were slightly weaker than market expectations. IT services business Cognizant also reported results below expectations due to weakness in the Financial Services division and a spending pullback in the Healthcare division as some larger clients focus on merger integration.
