Manager Commentary

The fund appreciated 2.82% in January, outperforming the MSCI World Index by 41 basis points.

FANUC, a pioneer in the automation of machine tools in factories and the development of computer numeric controls, was the top contributor in January; the stock rallied on the expectation of improved demand for robots in the US (on Trump's policy to increase capital and infrastructure spend), positive December Japanese machine tools orders and factory automation trends in China. Novozymes, the world leader in bio-innovation with 48% of the global industrial enzymes market, performed strongly in the month as it reported a positive end to a challenging year and exhibited excellent cost control; the company's strong pipeline supports a return to historical organic growth rates. Priceline, the online travel industry leader, also performed well aided by low fuel prices and strong travel flows.

The largest detractor in January was Cognizant, the leading provider of IT, consulting, and business process services. Investors fretted over macro weakness delaying decision-making on some discretionary projects, large healthcare deals failing to receive regulatory clearance and potential reduction in H1-B visas for its foreign workers. Macro weakness also affected sentiment around ADP, the leading provider of HR solutions. Intertek, the provider of total quality assurance services to industries worldwide, suffered as its main competitor reported continued weakness in the energy sector and a potential turn in the USD/GBP cross rate.

We continue to expect strong organic revenue growth from this portfolio of high quality growth companies to drive double-digit earnings growth per annum over the next five years.
